About the Native American Studies Major

The Native American Studies program at the University of Lethbridge was developed jointly by representatives of southern Alberta's Native communities and University officials. The program provides a general background for people interested in Native affairs taught from the Native perspective. For others, it creates an awareness and appreciation of cultural differences.

Expectations for Students

The Department of Native American Studies students are expected to develop familiarity with the histories and cultures of a variety of First Nations peoples. Moreover, students must become knowledgeable in the various laws and policies applied by different non-Aboriginal governments and societies in the colonization of Aboriginal lands. This study establishes the necessary background for the contemporary issues explored in many courses, where movement toward Aboriginal decolonization and self-government are examined from a variety of perspectives.

Opportunities for Native American Studies Majors

Native American Studies is a growing academic field that maintains a diverse array of contacts with Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal governments and communities, the private sector, the media, other educational institutions, the medical field, the legal profession, international organizations, and museums and art galleries. Students from all backgrounds are welcomed and encouraged to participate actively in the life of the Department in all its many manifestations and expressions.

Career Opportunities

Experience has shown that education in Native American Studies helps prepare students for work, careers, and higher education in a number of sectors including

- law
- government
- politics
- journalism
- business
- health professions
- art
- museology
- teaching

Co-operative Education

A Co-op option, requiring three work terms, is available. Students interested in the Co-operative Education/Internship program should contact the Coordinator of Co-operative Education in the Career Resources Centre (AH154 | phone: 403-382-7154) for further information.

Program Requirements

The B.A. degree with a major in Native American Studies requires 40 semester courses, including a minimum of 13 courses in the major. A maximum of 20 courses offered by the Department of Native American Studies (including Native American Studies, Cree, and Blackfoot) is allowed.

Transfer Credit

Remember that you may use both University of Lethbridge credit and credit transferred from another college or university to meet degree and major requirements. Transfer credit may be either specified or unspecified. Specified credit is indicated on your transcript by the subject name and the specific number of the course, e.g., Native American Studies 1000, Native American Studies 2300, etc. Unspecified credit (1XXX, 2XXX, etc.) is indicated by the subject name and level of the course in parentheses, e.g., Native American Studies (1000 level), Native American Studies (2000 level), etc.

Unspecified Course Credit

Unspecified course credit means that the University of Lethbridge does not offer the same course you transferred in, but we recognize it and treat it as a regular course. An unspecified course would count as one of your maximum of 20 from one department, but it could not meet a specific course requirement. For example, if Native American Studies 2550 is required in your program, you could not use Native American Studies (2000 level) to fulfill that requirement. Students with unspecified transfer credit need to consult an Academic Advisor to establish how the transfer credit fits in the degree program. This should be done as soon as possible after transfer credit is awarded.

Terms Used

GLER course: A course that could count toward the General Liberal Education Requirement. You may use courses in your major towards this 12-course requirement. See the 2012/2013 University of Lethbridge Calendar, Part 4 - Academic Regulations (p. 89) for complete information.

The Faculty of Arts and Science offers Liberal Education 1000 and 2000, specifically designed to introduce first-year students to the wide scope of human knowledge and teach essential university success skills, critical thinking, and integrative thinking (see the 2012/2013 University of Lethbridge Calendar, Part 14 - Courses, p. 312). LBED 1000 and 2000 may be used toward satisfying the GLER.

Elective: A course that you may choose freely from all those available and applicable to your program. Use courses inside or outside your major, bearing in mind any restrictions that may apply (e.g., a maximum of 20 courses from any one department).
